

CALL FOR JOURNAL ARTICLES!

The next issue of Virginia Educational Leadership, an online journal, will be published in the spring of 2012 and will center on the theme, Moving Forward: The Evolving Teacher, Learner, and Leader. Check our website for updated information. Authors are encouraged to submit articles that span a wide range of topics. Specific sections include, but are not limited to:

- Strides Toward Excellence: Examples of successful professional development implementations, meaningful collaborations, or other positive transformations.
- In Practice: What school and classroom practices help students reach higher levels of success?
- Research: Share the results of studies that relate to teaching, learning, and leadership.

Please join our efforts to celebrate the Commonwealth's great education work and workers! This journal is peer reviewed, so authors will receive feedback from at least two reviewers prior to being accepted for publication. Because this journal is published in an online format, authors should consider adding embedded videos, hyperlinks, slideshows, podcasts, audio or animations to enhance their articles. The deadline for submission of materials for the next issue is March 31, 2012. Manuscripts should follow format and reference guidelines outlined in the Publication Manual of the American Psychology Association (APA). Include your professional title, workplace, mailing and e-mail addresses, and a one to three sentence summary. If accepted, we will request a photo to be submitted. All manuscripts, book reviews, or other items should be sent to:
